Meeting Rooms and Conference Centres

horizontal and vertical illuminance creates a congenial, communicative atmosphere, which enhances the impact of the room furnishings and overall meeting experience. The lighting system employed throughout this area needs to be designed in such a way that it can easily meet the diverse requirements of different forms of meeting. This would include events such as formal board meetings, seminars, and product presentations, all interfaced with communication medium such as video conferencing, plasma screens, slide projectors, overhead projectors and flip charts.

The perfect conference room control system needs to integrate all of these technologies in order that a presenter can simply press one button on a lighting panel or a touch screen virtual button on a podium, to activate a chain of events which could dim the lighting, close the blinds / curtains, activate the monitor / plasma screen and begin the presentation. Quo Vadis can conveniently program all of these time consuming and complex activities and reduce them to the push of a single button.

The atmosphere of meeting rooms and conference centres depends heavily on a mixture of the quality of the interior design, air-conditioning, acoustics and lighting. When considering lighting, a generally balanced ratio of
